Here is my problem, I need to use a mysql table to populate the values and the values in the table are updated every few minutes via php. This means that I have to do this process daily and I do not want to have the php fill a 2 column table (a,b) with, say, 20,000 rows everyday. The code I have is: `SELECT a.ID, a.NAME, b.NAME AS [Player1] FROM a INNER JOIN b ON b.A_ID = a.ID WHERE a.ID > 0`

AND b.ID > 0; I am building an app that will allow the user to update a table. The table contains 'names' that are the players for soccer matches. I also have a match table with a 'home_team_id' and a 'away_team_id' field that match the 'home' and 'away' players in the table.

Currently, what I have to do is go to a php script and insert the players from the table into the players column for the correct matches. How can I have this done automatically and update the same table every time a new team is added? I do not want to create 20,000 rows with 'no_of_goals_scored' as the 'Name'. A: Are you looking for something along the lines of INSERT INTO table(name, team_id) VALUES(...? If so, you may add a column for a timestamp representing the time when the player's match was updated. Aridification, associated with sea-level rise and increasing temperatures, is increasingly becoming a global issue. Drought and water shortages are expected to continue to worsen into the future, which is also a challenge for land use planning. A method is needed to generate information on future land use scenarios that integrate land-surface evolution projections, water resource availability and changes in other environmental drivers. In this study, we coupled a hydro-agricultural model with a hydrology model (Hydro-AGRICEL), which deals with irrigation, water supply and diversion and evapotranspiration of the soil water balance. We prepared a regional land-use matrix by linking land-use units to climatic and hydrological parameters with the model and thus, projected future agricultural production and biodiversity for two
